The nearby lake and mountains provide a wealth of recreational opportunities, while the canton itself offers an extensive range of sport and leisure activities.

International connections. Nidwalden's affinity for aviation is legendary: the world-renowned Pilatus aircraft company has been based here for over 70 years. The focus of its operations is Buochs Airport, which is available to private as well as commercial users. As a result, Nidwalden benefits from exceptionally favourable international accessibility.

First-class location with attractive prospects. Nidwalden's exclusive locational advantages make it a highly attractive proposition as a place to live and work. The canton is also noted for its mild tax climate, its central location with international connections and the population's high standard of education and training. Nidwalden's effective partnership of business, politics, science and administration helps ensure that the conditions generate the requisite benefits.
